

Dec. 2013

A trip to Grand Teton and Yellowstone this year. Connie scouted a hot spring we could go play in, we watched baby bison, and hiked to a viewpoint. Jackson Lake was so low they couldn't put canoes out in it.

□ Andy and Frank got lots of healthful exercise working on projects. They build walls and cut down trees.

□ Connie has a new cat who thinks gophers are play-mates, not food. See pic on her Facebook page. Ted is a pushover for a furry friend.

□ Lots of hikes to strange places around here. The Passaic River has interesting paths along its banks. About thirty years ago there was a plan to put a big interchange in the flood-plain. They built an overpass and then walked away from the project. The overpass is fun to walk over, with creative graffiti on the walls.

□ Morris is in his second year at MIT and Henry will soon be in high school.

□ Frank still unlocks secrets of the universe with his colleagues at Princeton and I still spend summers working in the nature program and around the waterfront at the Silver Bay Y on Lake George.
